INSTALLATION INSTRUCTIONS (RISC OS)

The Collection is stored in RISC OS (Acorn outline) format in the RO.Fonts directory on the CD-Rom, there is one subdirectory for each letter of the alphabet. You can either add fonts to !Boot.Resources.!Fonts, where fonts are normally held on your computer, or create another !Fonts directory (recommended).

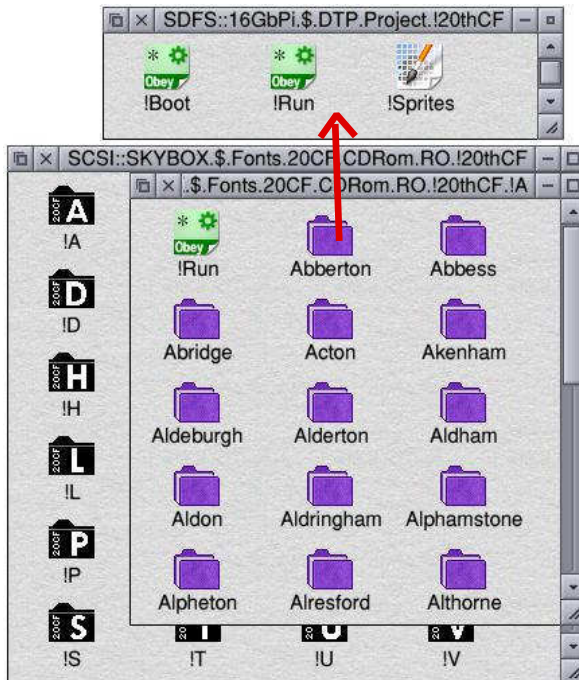

Creating a new !Fonts directory

Open the EmptyFonts directory inside RO.Fonts. Copy !20thCF (an empty fonts folder) to the location of your choice on your hard disc, e.g. 16GbPi.$DTP.Project

Installing new !Fonts

Double click RO.!20thCF to open up an alphabetical list of subdirectories. From the catalogue decide which fonts you would like, and double click the appropriate subdirectory corresponding to the first letter of the font name (e.g. double click IA for Abberton). Hold down Shift and open a directory viewer on 16GbPi.$DTP.Project.!20thCF and open another directory viewer for example RO.Fonts.!Fonts.A.Abberton and copy the font file.

Do this for any other desired fonts. Finally, double click on 16GbPi.$DTP.Project.!Fonts (or wherever you have put your new fonts) to install. You can use the !Characters app to view the font.

Uninstalling new !Fonts

In RO.Utils on the CD there are two short utilities. CancelLast is a short Basic program which will cause RISC OS to forget the most recently installed !Font folder and provide brief commentary on what it does. RISC OS holds the pathnames of fonts in a system variable (string) called Font$Path, separated by commas, for instance SDFS::16GbPi.$!Boot.Resources.!Fonts,Resources:$!Fonts. They are the fonts in !Boot and in Rom. Double clicking a new !Font directory adds the pathname to the front of the system variable string. CancelLast just removes the front of the string (up to the first comma). CancelAll will make the computer forget all but the fonts installed in Rom.

INSTALLATION INSTRUCTIONS (OTHER)

To install fonts on other operating systems such as Windows you need to convert them from the supplied Adobe Type 1 (PFA or Postscript Font Ascii) files, located in the T1 directory on the CD, to the format used by your operating system (e.g. TTF, True Type Font, on Windows). If you do not have a suitable utility installed on your machine you can try one of the many websites offering online conversion, for example www.fontconverter.org.

Font nomenclature

Fonts in the T1 folder on CD are in PFA format and suffixed using the following two-letter conventions:

A1, A2 etc	Alternates	HI	Heavy Italic
BD	Bold	IT	Italic
BI	Bold Italic	KI	Book Italic
BK	Book	KO	Book Oblique
BL	Black	LI	Light Italic
BO	Bold Oblique	LT	Light
DB	Demi Bold	ME	Medium
DE	Demi	MI	Medium Italic
CD	Condensed	MO	Medium Oblique
CO	Condensed Oblique	OB	Oblique
EB	Extra Bold	UL	Ultra
EI	Extra Bold Italic	XI	Extra Light Italic
HE	Heavy	XL	Extra Light

Conversion

In the below illustration the font Basildon Bold (BASILDONBD) is converted from PFA to TTF using fontconverter.org and is ready to install in C:\Windows\Fonts.

WORKING WITH FONTS ON RISC OS

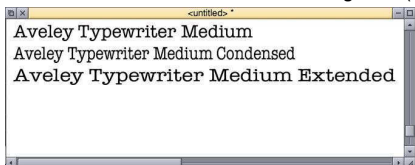

RISC OS has the reputation of being one of the most easiest to use of computer operating systems. It is no surprise, therefore, that RISC OS fonts can be customised with either just the built-in Draw application or free software.

Creating More Family Members

A font 'family' consists of variations on the basic font – italic, bold etc. Generally speaking, condensed, extended and oblique (sheared) versions of fonts are not supplied in the Collection as these can be easily created on RISC OS.

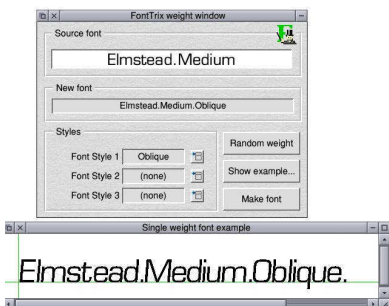

Condensed and Extended

Most Desk Top Publishing (DTP) packages will allow you to set the aspect ratio of the font but in the absence of such facilities it can be done in Draw. In the example below the basic typeface is Aveley Typewriter Medium. This was copied and a Condensed version created by choosing Menu > Style > Font size 10 and Font Height 12, i.e. aspect ratio of approximately 83%. The Extended version has Font size 14 and Font Height 12 (aspect ratio of about 117%)

Oblique and Italic

Strictly speaking, oblique means just a sheared version of the basic font whereas an italic font may have started off as its basic counterpart but then edited to create a more script-like appearance. The freely available FontTriX program has been used in the illustration below to create an oblique version of Elmstead.

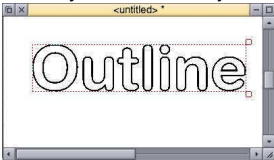

Outlines

The term outline is not to be confused with outline fonts which is a general term for scalable, vector (not bitmap) fonts which RISC OS has used ever since the 1980s. Outline in a typographical sense means an unfilled (hollow) version of the typeface which can easily be created in Draw.

- In Draw, select the  Text tool, your chosen font (Menu > Style > Font name) and type the line of text to be outlined.

- Choose the pointer tool  and click the text to select it. Choose Menu > Select > Convert to path. It turns it into a graphics object. You cannot then edit the text so you may like to make a copy of the text before choosing Converting to path.
- Alter the line colour to black (Menu > Style > Line colour) and fill colour to white. If you click OK with the adjust button after altering the line colour, the Style menu stays on the screen meaning you don't have to waste time and energy re-selecting options as you would on other computer operating systems.
- You may also wish to adjust the line width to give a more solid outline

- You can then drag-drop the object into another program e.g. DTP application.

More effects can be achieved by layering copies of the object with different line thicknesses and fills. In figure 1 below the bottom layer has a line and fill colour black, line width 8, and is offset vertically from the top layer which has a line width of 1, line and fill colour white. In figure 2, the bottom layer has a black line colour, white fill, line width 6, while the top layer has a white line colour, no fill and line width of 1. The two layers are centred (by grouping and choosing Menu > Select > Justify > Centre and Middle)

Multi-coloured fonts

Outline fonts are black and white only. You can create coloured fonts by converting your text to path (see under Outlines above) and separating the sub paths using a suitable application. For example the freely-available DrawWorksXL has a tool to split paths. Each element can then be coloured in a different colour to create an eye-catching effect such as in the illustrations below.

Troubleshooting

Slow font rendering

If fonts are being redrawn slowly try increasing the amount of memory assigned to the font cache. Do this by adjust-clicking on the switcher (raspberry) icon and clicking and dragging (with either select or adjust) the Font cache slider bar (under System memory allocation).

Font persistence

If you have altered the font, or even de-installed it, it may persist in the font cache. One way of ensuring it is deleted entirely is to drag in the Font cache slider bar back to the left, thereby reducing the font cache. Render the font (in Draw for example) then drag out the slider bar (increase the cache) to its previous value.

Font dropout

A handful of highly decorative typefaces suitable for poster work may not display with the current version of RISC OS manager owing to the complexity of their design. The font will 'drop out' and revert to the system font. For this reason, Draw versions have been supplied in the RO.Draw directory. Select the individual letters required and use Save > Selection (or shift+F3) and drag them to a new Draw window for editing.
